Tested by a Kansas Police Officer

I received the Stealth Ready Set from the NTOA for testing. I am a member of an emergency response team, and we just recently purchased some entry rifles. One of the members on our team already had purchased a Stealth sling for his rifle, so I was a little familiar with the sling. The installation for the Ready Set is very simple. It took about twenty minutes after reading the directions and sitting down to do it. It is a snap.

One of the features of the sling is the [swivel connector]. This feature is awesome. It allows the operator to remove the weapon and retain the sling. It also allows you to remove the weapon and put the weapon back on with only one hand. The sling mounts can also be placed on other weapons, which allow operators to switch weapons quickly and quietly with little effort.

While reading the instructions and doing a little research, I learned the slings are available in different colors, which is a great accessory. The sling also allows for smooth transitions between your long gun and handgun, plus the sling provides great weapon retention. Whoever designed the sling hit the nail on the head. This is a great product, and I have recommended it to other teams in my area. Thanks. God's speed and be safe.

Tested by a Michigan Police Officer

I tested the Interceptor Ready Set on a DPMS lower with a 16 inch Flat Top upper with an EOTech sight. When I received the Interceptor Ready Set I was pleased with the simple installation instructions with lots of pictures. Installation of the V-LR sling mount was very straight forward. Anyone comfortable with an M4 can install it in a few minutes. It's an innovative design that allows one part number to be installed on either side of the receiver. The sling mount fit the receiver perfectly and had no sharp edges to fray the sling. The sling may also be mounted directly to the collapsible butt stock with an included strap if desired.

The sling itself works exactly as advertised. The quick-release buckle was easy to use and weapon transitions with and without tactical gear were smooth. Shooting from either shoulder was easy and the sling was about as comfortable as can be expected.

I would recommend this sling system to anyone using an M4 type weapon that is looking for a simple multi function sling system for Police/Military work.

Tested by a California Police Officer

I was recently given the opportunity to test and evaluate the Encounter Ready Set made by Tactical Link. The first thing that I was pleased to discover was that the Ready Set included all of the necessary parts to attach the sling to my M4. As most SWAT operators know, sometimes it can be difficult trying to track down specialty parts in order to make a sling compatible with your weapon system. Obviously, Tactical Link utilized some forward thinking by addressing this issue and creating "Ready Sets".

Within a few minutes I removed my old sling that was held together with riggers tape in order to be compatible and attached the Barrel Side Sling Mount. It should be noted that I did not have to disassemble my weapon in order to attach the mounting hardware or the sling. The sling is 1.25" in width and made of ballistic nylon webbing. The color of the sling that I tested was black; however, Tactical Link does make the sling in olive drab and coyote tan.

One of the best features on this sling is the Quick-Release Buckle. The Quick-Release Buckle made donning and removing my M4 extremely easy and this was definitely a nice feature to have. I utilized this sling on several call outs and training operations and found it to be very durable and user friendly. I even tested this sling while rappelling and not once did I have to worry about the integrity of the Quick-Release system which proved to be as durable as the rest of the components. If you are looking for a versatile three-point sling that is durable and well made and if you do not want to have to worry about tracking down obscure parts to make the sling operational, I would highly recommend the Encounter Ready Set made by Tactical Link.
